DVD Review for Aqua Boy: A Film by John B. Mass (DVD) 03Mareva, with her husband, accepts a job as caretaker of the estate of a wealthy American. As she is getting acquainted with the farm, it becomes obvious that the farm's key employees dislike and distrust Mareva, as the staff mutinies, and accuses Mareva, Miriam, Ivan, and Mikho of sabotage, one of the employees is attacked by a horse, which she hits with a rock and is badly injured, John B. Mass is described as "a film-maker from San Francisco," who also wrote the screenplay for The White Ribbon (Dir. Michael Haneke).," in Journal of Film and Video. John B. Mass is also the author of Last Days on Mars (1988) and dark satire Assassinator: A Hollywood Murderer (1986). The DVD release of Aqua Boy was accompanied by a booklet with copies of reviews from corresponding media sources.(videohighlights) Those who have read my reviews of ZIKR and The Space Inside will be aware of the strong humanist philosophy which underlies the film. It is quite a different philosophy to that of Mike D'Angelo, who, when asked if a film with a happy ending was necessarily hollow, stated, "It is. As hard as it may be to accept, the whole point of entertainment should be catharsis, the cure of some residue of icky feelings and thoughts". (Advance movie of the week review, Orlando Sentinel, March 5, 1987, Allmovie) He then goes on to state that "The Space Inside is anti-happy ending", and that the "film tips the scales toward ugliness". He is of the opinion that "the last act is an act of torture" (Previews, December 26, 1989, Allmovie) Yet John B. Mass sees the film as a form of therapy or self-therapy which can be directed toward the viewer at all times, and is seen as a positive example of the Non-Hierarchical Approach to filmmaking, which he believes in and advocates. (The John B. Mass Institute for Non-Hierarchical Approaches to Film, a website for those who subscribe to the non-hierarchical philosophy, www.johnb.org/cgi-bin/article.cgi?article=1135, accessed January 3, 2013) Aqua Boy is

The year is 1895. Humanity has been enslaved by a race of ruthless robots. Just when you thought it was safe to go home, the army of robots have risen against their masters. With nowhere left to run, the survivors of the human race have been forced to live on an idyllic tropical island. While most others were forced to leave the beautiful beaches, the courageous few decided to stay. You and your friends have found a refuge for you and your families on the island. You have made a home for yourself and have decided to stay. You have built a paradise for your family and have stocked it with the most amazing fruits of the island. However, the only ones who know that you are there are you and your wife. Your friends and family have been lured away by humans of the enemy army, and this is your chance to prove that you are not one of them. You must fight against 10 mad robots who seek to enslave your families. Survive the biggest threat humanity has ever faced to save your friends and family. Fight your way to freedom to save your family. In general, a data processing device is a device that controls or operates in accordance with data. A desktop computer is one example of the data processing device. A vehicle is a kind of data processing device. That is, a computer which a driver operates to drive a vehicle receives a mechanical command of a steering wheel or a throttle pedal from a driver, and processes the mechanical command in accordance with predetermined information so that the driver can drive the vehicle safely. The computer controls a vehicle engine such as an engine, a motor, or the like. When a driver wants to perform vehicle engine control or vehicle steering control, the driver operates a key switch or a separate control button, and gives a command to the computer. The computer stores a current position of a vehicle or a current position of a driver, as position data. When the driver changes the current position of the vehicle from one position to another, the computer updates the position data. Meanwhile, conventionally, a related data processing device such as the computer updates the position data with a clock. The related data processing device calculates a distance between the current position and an objective position from the position data. In accordance with the calculated distance, the related data processing device controls vehicle driving or vehicle steering. However, the related art has the following problems. First, when a speed of the vehicle exceeds a predetermined value, the related data processing device may update the position data with an extremely
