The present invention relates to a new and distinct cultivar of Hydrangea arborescens 'Kakegawa' that is grown as an ornamental shrub for landscape use and for use in the gardening industry and which is listed in current literature as 'Miss Spruce' or 'Nana'. The new cultivar 'Kakegawa' was discovered as a chance seedling. 'Kakegawa' is a selection from plants of Hydrangea arborescens identified as ‘Miss Spruce’ or ‘Nana’ (unpatented in the U.S. as ‘Nana’) in a cultivated area of Japan. ‘Miss Spruce’ or ‘Nana’ is a miniature hydrangea plant with dark green foliage and that flowers from spring to fall. The parent or seed from which ‘Kakegawa’ was selected has been maintained and propagated by vegetative cuttings. The selection was selected in 2008 in Japan and has been asexually propagated from 2012 to 2013 at the nursery of Givaudan SAS, Parc de Forêt du Fontainebleau, 620

Rue des Acacias, Villers-Villeneuve-sur-Lot Cedex, France and has been found to retain its distinctive characteristics through successive asexual propagations by vegetative cuttings. 0cc13bf012

There have been no qualitative studies of the meanings and coping strategies of midlife people experiencing loneliness. This study aimed to address the meanings and coping strategies used by middle-aged people experiencing loneliness. A grounded theory design, informed by the theoretical perspective of symbolic interactionism, was used to guide data collection and analysis. A purposive sample of 19 people who had experienced loneliness in midlife was interviewed. A series of core categories were developed. Adversity, loss and adapting were the core categories that described the coping strategies of loneliness in midlife. Adversity was described as an anticipated risk to identity, a real and perceived loss of relationships, a new experience of loneliness, and distress and containment. Coping was an evasive strategy to manage adversity and to protect oneself from a sense of loss and loneliness, and loneliness was a discrediting and depressing experience. A sense of loneliness in midlife is a complex experience in which the person attempts to understand the loneliness and to cope with the emotional and social effects of the experience. The experience of loneliness in midlife is about loss, distress, disempowerment and ambivalent containment of threat, and the person must cope with adversity, reduce psychological distress, and reconstruct identity.We're back with our in-depth PlayStation Plus coverage.
